Undergraduate Research Opportunity

Dr. Auriel A. Willette, Assistant Professor in the departments of Food Science and Human Nutrition (home) and Psychology, is looking for additional male undergraduate research assistant volunteers to gain clinical experience conducting cognitive testing.

Dr. Willette is an NIH-funded researcher whose work has consistently been published in top-tier journals. His research on aging has been featured by Reuters, National Public Radio, the Huffington Post, Yahoo, Nature, AAAS, and many other media outlets.

Applicants should:

- *Be available at least 1, preferably 2, mornings per week (3 hours or more)
- *Be a male, as we require cognitive testers to be of the same sex as the research participants
- *Have a GPA \( \geq 3.0 \)
- *Not be a graduating Senior
- *Be willing to volunteer roughly 5-10 hours per week
- *Have a strong interest in brain and behavior and how they are relevant to nutrition
- *Be able to work independently

Research course credit is available. The ability to present work at local and international conferences is also available.

Please submit resume to Kelsey McLimans at mclimans@iastate.edu.

We look forward to meeting you!

Michela Moe will make a presentation from 4:00 - 4:30 and then will stay until 6:00 to talk with students. Our students mostly look at their chiropractic program rather than their naturopathic medicine program, so please schedule time to come to the presentation or chat with her afterwards to hear about their school.
Dear students,

As you received the announcement from the college, please participate in the Social Justice survey through the following website:
https://iastate.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_3PqRZcr6A89qV7L.
It should take only about 10 minutes.

In addition, there will be a raffle for four $25 gift certificates to the ISU Bookstore. Your participation is very important to improve ISU policy on diversity, equity, and community, which is critically important and timely topic nationwide as well.

Thank you for your participation.

Present
A Day of Dairy
(Event Date: Thursday, March 23, 2017)

A One-Day Exploration of On-Farm Dairy Production and Processing
We are excited to offer Iowa State students interested in food, health and/or agriculture-related careers the chance to share an experiential learning opportunity alongside dairy farmers and industry professionals. Throughout the event, students will come to better understand the science behind how dairy products get from the farm to the plate. Together, science, technology and innovation are helping the dairy industry meet consumer needs for safe, nutritious, fresh, convenient and sustainable foods – today and into the future.

Featured Activities
Iowa State Dairy Barn Tour
Visit the Iowa State dairy barn and learn first-hand about the steps dairy farmers take to ensure their cows are healthy and well cared for so you can enjoy safe, high quality milk. You’ll also learn about the efforts dairy farmers take to care for the environment on and around their farms. There will be ample time for questions and answers during the farm tour. Test your Dairy IQ during a trivia competition on the bus ride back to campus.

Dinner & Learning
Relax and enjoy dinner while a local dairy farmer shares information about farm life, their commitment to sustainability and what is being done to ensure you enjoy safe and nutritious dairy products. Listen to stories from several professionals about the paths that led them to their dairy related careers.

The ISU Volunteer Portal (aka VoPo) is a grassroots initiative (powered by GivePulse) to enable ISU students to find and track service learning and volunteer opportunities. Students voluntarily enroll through GivePulse and are connected to lists of various opportunities on campus and in the community. A key advantage of the system is that it is possible to provide Admin rights to various groups, departments, or clubs to manage their own links and opportunities. The motivation and direct benefit to students is that they can establish a personalized record of volunteer/service “impacts” over time (and link to it with a

The Science Bound Program at ISU is looking for current students pursuing a kinesiology major to help out with this event.

The Iowa State University VoPo is The Place for students to come to find volunteer opportunities on campus. We work with students, clubs, organizations, and Greek chapters to provide up-to-date information about the opportunities for volunteer civic engagement on campus and service-based initiatives that extend into the community at Iowa State University.

The Department of Kinesiology has established a Service Learning Hub that will help to introduce students to GivePulse early in their program and provide links to various outreach and service opportunities from our clubs and community partners. However, other departments can set up and manage their own links under the ISU organization. Highlights of experiences from our past work are provided below.

- Class-based Service-Learning: We utilized Give Pulse to enhance service learning in two undergraduate courses and received positive feedback from the pilot. In HS 430, we enrolled 47 service-learning students and formalized partnerships with 13 community organizations to help carry out a range of health-based service projects in the community. In HS 380, we enrolled 74 service-learning students and provided health and wellness screenings to 5 area worksites.

- Organization / Open Enrollment Service Coordination: We utilized Give Pulse to facilitate service/volunteer management for two different ISU organizations. We enrolled 118 student ‘ExerCYse Ambassadors’ in the system and these students tracked and recorded 331 unique service impacts. We also trained leaders from the ISU Blood Drive to facilitate the recruitment and coordination of over 500 volunteers successfully.

Formal evaluations were conducted to obtain feedback from students on GivePulse and these are summarized on separate documents. Preliminary observations revealed that the tool was easy to use and clearly valued. Many students have recorded their service “impacts” of their volunteering, and have explored further volunteer opportunities by being introduced to GivePulse. In an effort to partner with the Greek system, we built the infrastructure for students to register as part of the Greek Chapters. This was a passive notion (they were not told or required to search for and find their Greek Chapter) that led to 280 students to date registering within the Greek system under their specific chapter, while approximately 10 more Greek chapters have been added independent of the Admins. This shows that students were searching for their Chapters but did not find them and took it upon themselves to build their chapter in GivePulse. We’ve seen growth in chapter participation every week, via growth in number of users and members logging service hours on GivePulse independently.

Nearly 1,500 students have opted into the network on their own. We envision a larger and more integrated network that would enable other departments/faculty, clubs, and organizations to tap into the benefits and resources available through this system. The structure provided will help to ensure positive experiences for students while also ensuring that quality service is provided to the participating agencies. The management is inherently de-centralized and could be distributed to a single ISU entity or managed by our team to help support the initial growth. By taking small, calculated steps in the growth of the system, we hope to propose this platform for wide-scale service-learning and volunteering tracking for the entire ISU community.
